Our expertise

are small-group English theatre workshops with real connection, safe space and quality time to develop a mutual conversation between the group and the theatre professional(s). We highly value direct contact with students and their teachers.

A few examples

these workshops not only entertain your students, but also but also let them learn new communication, creative and empathy skills.

The Power of YOU

Finding your inner confidence through drama

Understanding Shakespeare

Demystifying the language of Shakespeare

Storytelling and Identity

Explore the complex theme of what forms our identity

"All the children loved the workshops and were full of enthusiasm for Shakespeare and English afterwards. The actors gave 100% effort and motivated and educated our students in drama and in the unique writing of Shakespeare. Many thanks!" 2018

"De verhalenverteller is een talent. Het was een meeslepend en grappig verhaal. De leerlingen (en ik) luisterden met smacht naar zijn verhaal. Het komt zelden voor dat 1 persoon zoveel leerlingen op hetzelfde moment heeft weten te boeien."

IBS Yunus Emre, Den Haag, 2019

Our team develops, grows and learns through international Erasmus+ programmes

...and why is it successful?

1. Theatre education has proved to be a unique way of non-formal learning, gaining insights in drama techniques, storytelling, communication and most importantly learning about oneself.

Why does STET have an education department?

2. Students learn lifelong skills through cultural education.

They:

- learn to articulate their emotions in a social situation (kerndoel 54)
- gain self-confidence
- develop to reflect on themselves and the world around them (kerndoel 55)
- become able to express themselves better
- learn (how) to effectively cooperate with others
- acquire some knowledge about the arts and learn to appreciate it (kerndoel 56)

3. STET Education provides a supplemental education programme that reinforces English language skills in order to help students do better in their curriculums and in their social life outside school.

4. Students gain insight in the creative work behind our productions by understanding what moves a professional artist to make what they make.
